THEY CHARGE IN LONDON.

Police, Postmen and Military Among Their Detainees.

London, July 7.—The constabulary of the Metropolitan Police force, through their committee, have telegraphed Home Secretary Matthews substantially as follows: "At a meeting held on Saturday it was resolved that you be respectfully asked to reply to the moderate demands of our petition. If your answer is in the affirmative a disastrous strike will be avoided. All the divisions await your reply and trust that all the men suspended will be reinstated."

The telegram was signed by each delegate from 21 divisions. In case a strike is decided upon, all of the divisions will hold a meeting in a few days. Shopkeepers are very much disturbed over the prospect. Clerks of the various banks have been ordered to remain at their posts all night.

A meeting of constables was held today at which it was decided the men would refuse to do duty tonight unless their demands are granted.

The police situation is rapidly nearing a crisis. The determined front of the men has led West End tradesmen and the banks to prepare for the worst. They have armed their clerks and retained every one of them on duty all night. In addition to this the shopkeepers and bankers have barricaded the fronts of their places, securely locked and heavily barred their places of business, the fronts of some of which have been rendered almost impenetrable to an artillery assault. Though these precautions have been taken not one of the frightened tradesmen and bankers can say what he really fears. The striking police themselves would be the very first to prevent this from taking advantage of the situation to plunder a house and the idea of a riot between the old and new is regarded generally as absurd. Still anxiety can tell what may happen. Sir Edward Bradford, the new commissioner of police, is also taking precautionary measures, evidently believing that the men are thoroughly determined to obtain compliance with their demands at all hazards. Accordingly he has withdrawn all the special policemen now employed at theatres, halls, dockyards and other places and ordered them to report for general duty. He has also called in the suburban reserve and posted all the special constables on the force that they are required to report for emergency duty at once. Dens of crime of every kind are being searched and the police are at all points, alternately checking this place and guarding for the home secret.

Police and chief commissioners. Menaced police were repeatedly compelled to clear the streets, but they were so soon cleared that they were not again. Many exciting scenes occurred, especially in Bow street, which is the headquarters of the disaffected men. The military has been called out to preserve order, but it is asserted that the soldiers are also disaffected, owing to the fact that their ranks are filled with relatives, friends and sympathizers of the recalcitrant policemen. The authorities profess the utmost confidence in their ability to overcome the crisis without difficulty, but the general public do not share their opinion. Postmaster-General Balfour has ordered the postmen to report for duty at 5 o'clock tomorrow morning under penalty of suspension. This action is taken by Mr. Balfour in order to enable him to ascertain who are the truly loyal members of his force. It is probable that a large number of the postmen will refuse to report at the hour named and their suspension will doubtless bring the post to a standstill. The military are also disposed to air their grievances; one regiment, quartered in the West End, has refused to perform routine duty, the men claiming that they are subjected to excessive and useless drill, and the War Office has decided to order the regiment to be sent to the front.

How Street and the streets in the vicinity of the major station were blocked this evening by a riotous mob, who prevented the constables from reaching the station. The mob became more turbulent and mounted officers endeavored to clear a passage but were booed and pelted with eggs of flour, sticks, stones, etc. The turbulence continued until a late hour. A few persons were slightly injured. A majority of the police refused duty. The Strand and other thoroughfares were better protected than usual tonight owing to the drafting of men from the suburbs. The Prince and Princess of Wales and their daughters left the opera house at 11.30 o'clock and were loudly cheered by the crowd. Rain fell steadily throughout the evening. In the suburbs all night police are on duty.

At 1 o'clock this morning the streets are quiet and comparatively deserted. The military have withdrawn to their barracks.

THE SARACEN SUN DANCE.

The features of the Sun Dance called "making braves" had not come off up to last evening. The Saracens had been beating their tom-toms, blowing whistles and indulging in a variety of noise for several days and nights, and yesterday a runner was sent out to announce that the big event was coming off in the afternoon.

It came into town and excited his commission, receiving nearly a plague of telegrams for his trouble. A number of persons went out during the afternoon to take in the situation, but the number being limited and their contributions of cash, tobacco or tea-being equally scarce, no braves were made. A quartette of ladies from the Alberta were among the visitors, and members of the dance, which was vigorously kept up, and they brought a number of dances effects, such as whips, tom-toms, etc. They could not get to see the painted saracens, who were dressed in a variety of colors, the gorgeous suits in which they were arrayed, the stateliness of the dance, the harmony of the music, the natural way in which male and female were grouped on the ground with the music, the graceful head dress of the medicine men, and the pantomime worthy of a better cause with which the half-dressed youngsters legged for even a "chew tobacco." The ladies were found to dwell their gazing on, and the younger Saracens, following the example, inspected the ladies' carriage and finally took possession of it for a brief period only, as they were soon headed off. The writer, accompanied by the doctor who is a best known to all the Saracens tribe, had the honor of an introduction to big chief Bull Head, who was seated on a high ground near the center of the lodge with as much dignity as was attainable under the circumstances. The doctor introduced the writer, who was the nephew of Joe Spence, and Bull Head was good enough to say that he liked the doctor, that the doctor's newspaper friend was his friend, and that the best behaved visitors could have the run of the camp, especially as one had brought a present of tobacco and the other had placed a small sum in cash in Bull Head's pocket, but as for some other fellows that were coming around, noting every where without bringing presents, they were an annoyance to him and a nuisance, and he found nothing enjoyable in their society. They couldn't have the courtesy of the camp. The chief wanted to know of his visitors whether they wished to see braves made, and expressed a desire to accommodate them, but as the Saracens might see the visitor more than it was worth, and having before their eyes the policy of the Government to discourage such exhibitions, the diplomatic reply was given that the visitors desired only to take in what was going on and desired no special display on their own account. The impression received from contact with the native braves was that unless the whites turned out in larger numbers and contributed more freely than they have done so far this week, there will be no "braves made."

There will, however, be some handsome Indian suits for sale in a few days. The Saracens are camped on the prairie of the elbow adjoining the Chipman ranch, and the scene, embracing their tepee arranged in an extended circle with mounted Indians passing to and fro, a host of ponies grazing in all directions, added by the drum beating, the whistling, shouting, whistling and dancing—is a striking novelty to those who witness it for the first time.

The Boy Killers Arrived.

(Special to The Herald.)

The boys, Campbell and McDonald, who were captured by the Mounted Police at Medicine Hat, charged with the theft of horses, cattle, etc., arrived here by train this morning and are now in the barracks in safe custody. The addition, quite, even revolver and the rest of their outfit came with them. The horses are still at Medicine Hat and will be taken to their owners—Dr. Lindsay and Mr. Edward Jackson—when they are brought home the best way they can. The lads have had quite a crisis during their expedition. They were sent north towards the Red Deer, and they cruised the wooded country, talking to country of their movements, being apparently as "green" a bunch of newcomers as ever existed in dime novels. We imagine they are now in a state of grave anxiety, and are being gravely of their offences. Milton Field, owner of one of the stolen saddles, is out of town and the boys will not be examined until his return. An inquiry the Winnipeg lawyer, who is well known, reports that he has been out every day or two, and expects to bring home a report that he has not been arrested long ago.

—There has been much speculation of late in C. P. B. stock. A known Montreal firm has been speculating in this stock when it was negotiated, and has since sold it at a profit to realize between $50,000 and $100,000. A certain well known business man, who is a member of the C. P. B. (also in Montreal) has been speculating in this stock, and has been speculating in the stock on speculation.
